

Mysteries and Conspiracies

Agatha Christie, a famous mystery novel author, once famously said, "The simplest explanation is always the most likely." However, when something shocking or catastrophic happens in our lives, simple explanations just aren't enough. We crave deeper reasons and meanings, and sometimes we create our own.

Conspiracy theories can attract a wide array of people, from vehement supporters to those who just like a good story. Whether they're somewhat believable or completely ridiculous, the most popular conspiracy theories are fascinating.

Some of the most popular conspiracy theories revolve around the deaths of John F. Kennedy, Princess Diana, and Elvis. There are some other popular theories about 9/11, global warming, and alien invasions.

However, one of the wackiest theories says that most world leaders are actually shape-shifting reptilians from a different planet who start wars and are responsible for horrific events like 9/11 in order to promote fear and hatred, which gives them strength. Oh, and they're seven feet tall. Can you believe it?
