

Emergency

Reading

Have you ever been in an emergency? Were you ever in a risky situation? As society becomes more complex, danger seems to lurk around every corner. Terrible car crashes are probably the most common sort of sudden, serious calamity, but the number of violent crimes, burglaries, fires, and so forth also seems to rise continuously.

And yet most people fail to take any steps to deal with any of these possibilities should they occur. "It can't happen to me" seems to be a common attitude. But accidents are far more likely to occur when they are unexpected than when anticipated. We should all receive training in how to deal with an emergency situation: first-aid lessons, self-defense, how to contact the proper authorities quickly, and so forth. Our failure to be prepared could literally mean the difference between life and death.

You can see the whole lesson from your teacher, please ask them to send it to you before the class.
