Reading

Many people who have gone through near-death experiences have reported experiencing eerily similar phenomena.

In the first stage, the person feels separated from their body. They often look down on it from above and, even while unconscious, can hear conversations around them. They report seeing their lives flash before their eyes seeing not only their past experiences, but also the effects their actions had on others. Then they travel through a tunnel towards a bright light that fills them with an overwhelming sense of peace and love.

In the final stage, there is a bridge that seems to symbolize the final passing over from life into death. Loved ones who have already passed on, stand on the other side and tell them that it is not their time yet and they must return to life.
