

Newly Discovered Frog Looks Like Kermit

Source: <http://teachingkidsnews.com/2015/11/01/newly-discovered-frog-looks-like-kermit/>

Recently, a scientist discovered a type of frog that looks a lot like Kermit. It has been named Hyalinobatrachium diana, after the mother of one of the scientists; her middle name is Diane.

Kermit the Frog is a muppet—a well-known puppet frog who has bulgy eyes and is a special shade of green.

The frog found in Costa Rica looks a lot like that. It has big google-eyes with black pupils that sit on the top of its head, and it is a uniform shade of bright lime green, similar to Kermit. Just about the only thing it's missing is Kermit's signature pointy collar. (And Kermit's ability to speak, of course.)

The announcement of the new frog was made by the Costa Rican Amphibian Research Center.

You can see the whole lesson from your teacher, please ask them to send it to you before the class.

テキスト全文はレッスン受講時に担当講師よりお受け取りください。