

Four-Year-Old's Paintings Worth $10,000

A four-year-old of Russian heritage is exhibiting her paintings at a gallery in New York. Nine of her paintings are on exhibit, and are selling for close to $10,000 each. The gallery director is impressed by Aelita's work, saying that the young artist understands texture and colour and has already developed a unique style. Aelita first exhibited in a Melbourne Gallery at the age of two. Her parents are both artists, and they are also impressed by their daughter's talent. Art critics are interested in how Aelita comes to the canvas with an innocent eye. When she was only two years old, she painted live for an audience in Hong Kong. Her art has been compared to Jackson Pollock's. Others have called her Pee Wee Picasso.

Source: www.englishclub.com

Vocabulary

heritage - that which is passed on from previous generations

exhibit - to show one's art in a gallery or art show impressed - very pleased with the quality or success of something texture - the feel or consistency of something canvas - the stretched out material that painters create their art on

Comprehension Questions

1. Who is Aelita Andre?
2. How much is the young child's art worth?
3. Why does the report mention Jackson Pollock?

You can see the whole lesson from your teacher, please ask them to send it to you before the class.

テキスト全文はレッスン受講時に担当講師よりお受け取りください。