

Scar

Vocabulary:

patch

surgery

centuries

impress

chickenpox

Do you know what is a scar? Do you have one? A scar is the pale pink, brown, or silvery patch of skin that grows in the place where you once had a , cut, scrape, or sore. A scar is your skin's way of repairing itself from injury.

Look at your skin. You probably have one or two scars already. Most people do. Why? Because a lot of things leave behind scars — from falls to surgeries.

Scars are part of life and they show what you've been through. For some people, scars are special. A kid in your class might have a scar on his chest because he had heart surgery as a baby. Or you might have a scar from chickenpox.

You can see the whole lesson from your teacher, please ask them to send it to you before the class.

テキスト全文はレッスン受講時に担当講師よりお受け取りください。